Subject: Requesting approval for Museum Studies TTF search
Date: Tuesday, July 1, 2014 at 4:40:08 PM Pacific Daylight Time
From: Patricia Dewey
To: Frances Bronet
CC: Brooke Freed

Dear Frances,

I hereby formally request that the Arts and Administration Program be permitted to move forward with a search for a new tenure-related faculty member in museum management / museum studies. A search plan for 2014-2015 is provided below.

My understanding is that an initial approval is required from you to both begin the search and to provide a competitive salary range for the position. As we've discussed, we would most likely seek to hire at the Associate Professor or Professor level, with tenure.

Please let me know if you require any additional information from me at this time. As indicated in the timeline below, I would like to begin paperwork for this search over the summer, and gather the search committee together for a first meeting as soon as possible after September 15, 2014.

Thank you in advance for your support,
Patricia

Arts and Administration Program
School of Architecture and Allied Arts, University of Oregon
Tenure-Related Faculty Position Announcement
Beginning September 2015

Associate/Full Professor, Museum Studies/Museum Management Specialization, Arts and Administration Program, School of Architecture and Allied Arts, University of Oregon, Eugene, OR.

The University of Oregon (UO) Arts and Administration Program (AAD) invites applications for a full-time tenure-related faculty position at the rank of associate professor or full professor level, to begin in fall 2015. This faculty member will lead and develop the Museum Studies/Museum Management area of concentration in the graduate Arts Management degree program, will oversee the UO Museum Studies Certificate Program, and will have the capacity to provide leadership to the UO Arts and Administration Program as a whole. This new faculty member will join a thriving team of five tenure-related faculty and twenty career instructors in developing scholarship and instructional programs at the intersection of research, teaching, and community engagement.

University Context:

The University of Oregon is an AAU research university with roughly 25,000 students. The UO Arts and Administration Program (AAD) resides within the School of Architecture & Allied Arts. At the graduate level, AAD offers a Master's degree in Arts Management with concentrations in arts in healthcare management, community arts management, museum management/museum studies, and performing arts management. AAD also offers a doctoral supporting area of study to UO School of Music and Dance doctoral students. At the undergraduate level, AAD offers a minor in Arts Management as well as university-wide arts and letters courses. An undergraduate major in Arts Management is currently in development. Other significant components of the program include the Center for Community Arts and Cultural Policy and the online publication CultureWork. Details of AAD faculty, students, program offerings, and activities can be found at <http://aad.uoregon.edu/> as well as <http://ccacp.uoregon.edu>

The Museum Studies/Museum Management concentration of the Arts Management master's degree at the University of Oregon prepares individuals for leadership positions in areas such as museum education, exhibition design, development, evaluation, and management. Students completing this concentration are qualified to work in a variety of museums: art, natural history, history, or science. This concentration advances a multicultural, cross-cultural perspective addressing both western and non-western concerns and values. Core courses provide critical perspectives and address practical, ethical, and theoretical concerns. The museum courses are taught by faculty and museum professionals in anthropology, art, art history, history, and arts administration. Courses incorporate practical experience in the University of Oregon's two museums, the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art and the Museum of Natural and Cultural History, as well as museums in the community. Both of the University's museums have recently completed major renovations. The Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art has doubled in size. These institutions offer diverse practicum and internship opportunities for AAD students.

The Museum Studies Graduate Certificate Program addresses the demand for professionally-trained museum personnel by offering a masters-level, multidisciplinary course of study sponsored by the Arts and Administration Program, the Department of Architecture, the Department of the History of Art and Architecture, the Department of Anthropology, and campus museum professionals.

Qualifications: Doctorate (Ph.D. or Ed.D.) or other terminal degree is required, preferably specializing in a discipline or field closely related to arts administration and museum studies. A record of significant research achievements is required, as is a clearly articulated research agenda relevant to museum studies.

Current rank of tenured associate or full professor at a similar academic institution is desired. At least five years' full-time professional museum experience is desired. Applicants should demonstrate evidence of college or university teaching excellence, other leadership experience in arts or cultural management, administrative competencies, active professional service, and strong commitment to scholarly activity and publications. Highly desirable is evidence of entrepreneurial leadership skills, experience related to leadership of cultural research centers and institutes, the ability to secure external funds, and demonstration of teaching in non-traditional formats. The successful candidate will need strong interpersonal and communication skills, the ability to form and lead collaborative local and regional teams, and the ability to develop synergies with other academic programs within the university. The Arts and Administration Program seeks an outstanding academic leader who conducts groundbreaking research, has considerable professional museum experience, wishes to play a key role in shaping the future direction of UO Museum Studies and the Arts and Administration Program as a whole, is committed to innovative pedagogy and curriculum development, and enjoys close mentoring of students.

Responsibilities: Maintain an active research agenda and productivity in scholarship. Teach graduate and undergraduate courses in the fields of arts management and museum studies. Provide academic and career advising students seeking a degree in Arts Management and the Museum Studies Certificate; direct Master's theses and projects. Work toward enhancing the curriculum of the Arts and Administration Program, plan and participate in activities outside of the classroom, and forge alliances and productive partnerships with units across campus and the professional field of museums regionally, nationally, and internationally. Committee service to the program, school, and University is expected.

Salary: Commensurate with qualifications. The University of Oregon offers an excellent benefits package.

Application Procedures:

Please submit only the following; additional items submitted will not be considered in the first review of applications.

1. A letter of application explaining your interest in the position and which position you would like to be considered for (Associate Professor or Full Professor)
2. Your full CV
3. A one-page statement of your scholarly approach to arts administration and museum studies;
4. A one-page statement of your approach to academic leadership and professional collaboration;
5. A one-page statement of your teaching philosophy and approach toward mentoring students;
6. Copies of two of your peer-reviewed journal articles in the museum management/museum studies field;
7. Names and contact information for three recommenders (no letters please).

The position will be open until filled. Review of applications will begin December 1, 2014. Semi-finalists will be interviewed by telephone or Skype. Semi-finalists and finalists may be asked to submit additional information, such as additional publications, course syllabi, and evidence of academic program leadership. Finalists will be interviewed on campus in winter term 2015. The University of Oregon is an equal-opportunity, affirmative-action institution committed to cultural diversity and compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act. We invite applications from qualified candidates who share our commitment to diversity.

Assistant/Associate Professor, The Graduate Program in Museum Studies, Department of Design, College of Visual and Performing Arts, Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY.

Syracuse University invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track position at the rank of assistant or associate professor for the Graduate Program in Museum Studies, beginning Fall 2014.

The Graduate Program in Museum Studies offers a curriculum focusing on hands-on practice, research, scholarship, and design. Graduates are prepared to pursue a wide range of positions in different types of museums and other non-profits in the cultural field. The faculty and staff of the program are devoted to educating and training students to be resilient, creative, and highly qualified professionals, capable of exceptional performance in diverse working environments.

SU's museum studies program seeks a professional practitioner, with a well-established museum/professional background, and experience in such institutions as aquariums, gardens, history or science museums, or national parks. The new faculty member will join a team of professional faculty and staff, and work toward enhancing the curriculum, and planning and participating in activities outside the classroom, including, but not limited to, exhibition installations, field trips, and the development of a speaker series.

Our new faculty member will primarily teach graduate courses; assist with curriculum development; and provide academic and career advising. Committee service to the program, department, college and University is expected, as is interaction with the professional museum community. Faculty members must be committed to teaching and engaging in scholarship or creative activity.

Basic qualifications: A Master's degree plus professional experience, or MFA/Ph.D. depending on the field in which he/she has earned their degree; significant practice in museum and/or related non-profit organizations; and substantial teaching experience in a college or university setting. A record of involvement with national and/or international museum, professional and/or scholarly organizations is strongly encouraged. The successful candidate must have excellent communication skills and be able to participate in the installation of exhibitions, which might include moving and lifting objects of various weights, as well as climbing ladders. A valid driver's license is required.

Syracuse University is a private, coeducational and residential university. It's full-time, main campus enrollment of 11,000+ undergraduates and 4,000+ graduate students represent the United States, about 100 foreign countries and varied economic and social backgrounds. The university contains nationally recognized programs in citizenship and mass communication. For more information on the university, please visit <http://www.syr.edu>. Syracuse University is an AA/EOE.) Applications will be received online through www.sujobopps.com. Only complete applications will be considered. Please send a cover letter with a statement of professional experience and teaching philosophy. Include a curriculum vitae or extended résumé, and a list of three (3) professional references. Review of applications will continue until the position is filled. Additional materials might be requested. To apply visit www.sujobopps.com JOB#070896. Syracuse University is an AA/EOE.

Job posting: Full/associate professor and director of museum studies, University of Toronto

- Posted by Costis Dallas on September 28, 2010 at 11:00am
- View Blog

Dear colleagues, I'd like to bring to your attention the pending deadline of 30 September for those interested to apply for the position of director of Museum Studies in the iSchool (Faculty of Information), University of Toronto. This will be a full-time, tenure stream appointment at the rank of associate or full professor. According to the job search announcement, the Faculty is looking for someone who will not only run the successful Master's in Museum Studies programme, but will also play a key part in shaping the direction of further academic offerings in the field of museums and cultural heritage, in leading groundbreaking research with a strong academic team, and in developing synergies with other programmes and specialties within the iSchool.

I have been privileged to be associated with the Toronto Museum Studies programme for the last couple of years, and I can vouch for the intellectual strength, the dynamism and the fertile academic environment provided by the faculty members and students of the programme itself, and the iSchool more generally. The Toronto MMSt is probably one of the strongest museum studies programmes in North America, attracting a formidable quality of postgraduate students, and has in its long history produced significant contributions to museum scholarship as well as nurtured a generation of successful museum professionals, in Canada and beyond. The unique association of a museum studies programme with an iSchool creates an exciting springboard for both theoretical and praxis-oriented work, and a prime opportunity for innovation in our changing field. As is apparent from the job posting, there's a broad range of specialisms that will be considered (from museum management and leadership to museum technologies and media, and everything in between), but also a mandate for innovation, in the context of the great changes affecting museums of the 21st century - including those that are often the topic of discussion in the Museum 3.0 community.

The full job posting, with links for online submission and further information details, can be consulted at:

<https://utoronto.taleo.net/careersection/10050/jobdetail.ft?lang=e...>

Please give this your consideration, or notify others who you think may be fitting and interested. The 30 September deadline is pending, but the process will remain open until the job is filled.

The University of California, Irvine is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer committed to excellence through diversity. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability, age, protected veteran status, or other protected categories covered by the UC nondiscrimination policy.

Assistant or Associate Professor Position in Critical & Curatorial Studies

Position Description. The Department of Art at UC Irvine's Claire Trevor School of the Arts seeks an Assistant or Associate Professor of Critical & Curatorial Studies. The Department of Art offers both Bachelor of Arts (BA) and Master of Fine Arts (MFA) degrees. The starting date for the position is July 1, 2014, with teaching beginning in September 2014.

Faculty positions at the University of California entail research, teaching, and service responsibilities. The Department seeks a colleague conducting research at the forefront of critical and curatorial studies, broadly defined as the theory and practice of exhibitions and related discourses. Candidates should possess a deep understanding of contemporary art and its precedents, with expertise in one or more of the following: art history, critical theory, performance studies, film/media studies, emerging digital technologies. The Department is interested in curatorial practices that challenge the limits of existing conventions and demonstrate an ability to take a stand, pose questions, and encourage new possibilities, especially in areas where silence has reigned. Candidates must be able to teach courses at the undergraduate and graduate level, while possessing the versatility to conduct critiques, special topic seminars, and university-wide lecture courses on contemporary art.

The successful candidate will become a core faculty member in a growing Critical and Curatorial Studies area (C&C) with active research and instructional programs. With the opening of our Contemporary Art Center in 2012, the campus now has three galleries of greater combined scale than many comparable universities. These curatorial platforms function as research laboratories for exhibitions and commissioned artworks. The C&C program is affiliated with the UCI Program in Visual Studies, as well as other units in the arts, humanities, and sciences. In coming years, the Department will launch an International Center for Critical & Curatorial Studies (CSCA) and a related new PhD program.

With 24 resident faculty members, the UCI Department of Art is a heterogeneous group of artists and scholars, valuing inquiry and experimentation over specific ideologies and intellectual methods. The department's research and instruction examines how definitions of art play themselves out in contexts ranging from the personal to the public, from the gallery to the street. Located in one of the most diverse regions of the United States, the Department remains mindful of its role in a global society. Faculty interests include legacies of modern and post-modern art discourses, "post-studio" practices, gender and queer theory, deconstruction and postcolonial critique, media and new technologies, museum and curatorial studies, social practice and public/community cultural work.

Qualifications. PhD, or equivalent training; a record of significant research achievements; minimum of 3 years of teaching experience at the post-secondary level (for applicants to the Assistant Professor position), or a minimum of 5 years of teaching experience at the post-secondary level (for applicants to the Associate Professor position); and a strong commitment to teaching, research, service, and collegial collaboration.

Application Requirements.

- 1) A cover letter explaining interest in the position and which position you would like to be considered for (Assistant Professor or Associate Professor; see qualifications above);
- 2) CV, including record of publications, projects, and/or weblinks;
- 3) Statement of research practice;
- 4) Statement of teaching philosophy; and student mentoring
- 5) Names and contact information for three recommenders; and
- 6) Copies of three (maximum) publications, to: <https://recruit.ap.uci.edu>.

Statement on leadership and professional collaboration
Optional. Applicants have the option to submit a portfolio of up to 10 images and other media samples to: <https://ctsa.slideroom.com>. There is a fee associated with submission of materials.

Deadline. Thursday, April 10, 2014, with application review continuing until the position is filled.

The History Department is a diverse group of scholars covering many areas of specialization. We pride ourselves on outstanding teaching. We offer small classes that allow a great deal of individual attention. In addition, our faculty advisors offer close contact and personal attention to each student. The History major is a place to get a “small college” education in a big state university.

Primary Function of Organizational Unit

The department of twenty-nine professors has about three hundred fifty majors in three undergraduate programs—the Bachelor of Arts, the Bachelor of Arts with a Teacher Education Concentration, and the Bachelor of Sciences. All programs offer a great deal of student choice in courses and electives, allowing the pursuit of either a broad educational experience or a focused study. Our 80 student graduate program offers two distinct degrees: the M.A. in History and the M.A. in Public History. However, both degree programs require a strong foundation in traditional history.

For further information on the department of history please visit <http://history.ncsu.edu>.

Essential Job Duties

NC State University invites applications for an open-rank position in Public History beginning August 2015. The department seeks an outstanding individual who is an active researcher, has applied public history experience, is committed to innovative pedagogy and curriculum development, enjoys close mentoring of students, and works well as part of a team of public history faculty. The position is integral to the department’s new doctoral program in Public History. Any public history specialization other than archives will be considered. In addition to teaching public history courses and advising dissertation work at the graduate level, the successful candidate will teach “traditional” history courses at the graduate and undergraduate levels. The rank is open, but appointment to the tenure-track position at the rank of assistant professor requires the earned doctorate by August 2015.

Position Vacancy Listing

PVL # 80521

Working Title:

Director/Curator

Official Title:

FACULTY ASSOCIATE(D92DN) or ASSOC FACULTY ASSOC(D92FN)

Degree and area of specialization:

Ph.D. with specialization in textiles, broadly defined (for example; material culture studies, art history, art administration, museum studies, design history, etc.).

Minimum number of years and type of relevant work experience:

Five years managing a collection.

- Record of success and tangible accomplishments related to collection development.
- Demonstrated success in grant writing.
- Demonstrated success in collection administration.

Five years teaching experience related to textiles.

- Experience communicating with a diverse and broad group of stakeholders and partners, such as students, scholars, designers, artists, industry leaders, scientists, and private and corporate donors.
- Experience managing and leading collaborative teams.

Principal duties:

The School of Human Ecology seeks an intrepid individual to direct the Helen Louise Allen Textile Collection, the Ruth Davis Design Gallery, and the Ruth Harris Library (collectively known as TREO) into its next era in a new building with state-of-the-art collection and learning facilities.

PRINCIPAL DUTIES:

60% The successful candidate will be attracted to the interactive teaching/learning role and will draw on the resources within a teaching and research institution to provide impactful learning experiences. Such activities include, but are not limited to, mentoring project assistants and undergraduate and graduate student assistants in their teaching and scholarly publications, creative exhibitions, conferences, and lectures. The individual will also contribute to the development of a campus-wide curatorial education program to reach out to learners interested in curating as a profession.

The individual will extend teaching and learning through the interpretation of culturally significant objects for faculty, students and guests, developing accessioning/de-accessioning policies, conducting research for exhibitions and contributing to the education of students in campus curatorial and museum practices programs.

40% Working collaboratively with Department of Design Studies faculty and staff and reporting to the Dean of the School of Human Ecology, the individual will build partnerships with the broader campus community, businesses and industries, recognizing the contribution and value of design in local and regional development. The Director represents the TREO resources more broadly through activity in regional and national textile-related communities.

The person chosen for the position will be responsible for developing and executing a sustainable business and program plan within the higher education setting and will actively seek the input of diverse constituencies but will report to the Dean of the School of Human Ecology.

A criminal background check will be conducted prior to hiring.
