Promote and Publish Your Work
A Presentation to the USFSP
Undergraduate Research Symposium
April 11, 2013

http://dspace.nelson.usf.edu/xmlui/handle/10806/6415

Carol Hixson
Dean, Nelson Poynter Memorial Library and
Alex Brice
Associate Professor, College of Education

Why Promote and Publish Your Work?

- Share the results of your research widely
- Get credit for your work
- Contribute new knowledge to your field
- Build your portfolio for work or graduate school
- Get connected with others interested in the same topic
- Secure grant funding for more research

How to Promote Your Work

- Submit work to the USFSP Digital Archive's collection for the Undergraduate Research Symposium, and/or

- Publish in the USFSP Student Research Journal

USFSP Digital Archive
http://dspace.nelson.usf.edu/

What Does the USFSP Digital Archive Do?

- Highlights individual, group, and institutional achievement
  - Includes use statistics to track impact
- Improves access to and discoverability of materials
  - Provides unique and unchanging URL
  - Full text indexing
  - Indexed by Google, Google Scholar, etc.
    - Increases visibility of USFSP

What Does the USFSP Digital Archive Do?

- Protects intellectual property
  - Credits authors and creators
  - Provides date and time stamp for all work
  - Provides copyright protection
- Accepts all types of materials
  - Multiple files per item and different file types
- Preserves materials

USFSP Student Research Journal

- The Student Research Journal follows a tradition of student scholarship found in many other schools, including Berkeley, Clemson, and Harvard. There are five guiding principles for the online USFSP Student Research Journal:
  - The Student Research Journal is published through on-line submissions.
  - The Student Research Journal is available online through a platform that indexes, retrieves, and tracks the usage of the articles in it.
  - The American Psychological Association (APA) 6th edition will be used as the preferred style format.
  - Submission procedures and form are accessible online.
  - A rolling publication system allows for flexibility in publishing special issues and rolling out new editions.

Benefits of the Student Research Journal and the Digital Archive

- Highlights individual, group, and institutional achievement
- Improves access to and discoverability of materials
  - Provides unique and unchanging URL
  - Full text indexing
  - Indexed by Google, Google Scholar, etc.
- Protects intellectual property
  - Credits authors and creators
  - Provides date and time stamp for all work
  - Provides copyright protection
- Accepts all types of materials
- Preserves materials

To Submit Your Research to the Digital Archive

- Review Going Green – Instructions for Submitting to the Undergraduate Research Collection online
http://dspace.nelson.usf.edu/xmlui/handle/10806/4509

OR

- Contact Carol Hixson, Dean of Library
  - 873-4400
  - hixson@usfsp.edu

USFSP Student Research Journal

Published in the USFSP Digital Archive at:

http://dspace.nelson.usf.edu/xmlui/handle/10806/10

To submit an article to the Student Research Journal, contact Dr. Alejandro Brice aebrice@mail.usf.edu