

Heather Ward is a Humanities Librarian and subject specialist for history and medieval studies at the University of Oregon where she has worked since 1997. In working with faculty in her subject areas and patrons at the reference desk, she has noticed an increasing interest in finding and using primary sources over the last several years. In 2003 she teamed up with Heather Briston, University Historian & Archivist, to create and teach a four-credit course on primary source research. Heather W.'s leisure time is heavily spent on French classes and competitive Irish step dancing.
