

Fear of “the Other” – North Carolina

Continues Fear of “the Other”- New York State and The Censoring of Critical Thinking in the United States – the Fear of “the Other”

This is my third installment of listed items documenting the political bias sweeping the United States in the guise of supporting parental control and avoiding so-called “divisive” concepts such as Critical Race Theory. As I said in The Censoring of Critical Thinking in the United States – the Fear of “the Other”, I consider the book bans, legislative attempts to control what people think or are exposed to, as well as the overt acts of hatred perpetrated against people of color, people who are not binary heterosexuals, people who are not Christian, and people who are not of European ancestry as being all part of the same fear of “the other”.

As I work my way through this project of documenting fear and loathing through the individual states, I am gratified to find that there are many local newspapers and independent news outlets that are documenting what is happening in their area. That is the one bright spot for me and tells me how important it is for people to support their local newspapers through subscriptions to print or digital formats.

This listing provides examples specific to North Carolina in recent years. There are many more examples from North Carolina, and every other state. These are illustrative only. If I tried to be exhaustive, I would never be done. Listings are in reverse chronological order.
